exportation of arms and ammunition into Mexico, the government of the United States put itself and intends to put itself, in the same position as other nations, whose subjects all along have been at liberty to deal as they pleased with Mexico. The government of the United States deems it essential to the settlement of her present dif-ficulties that Mexico should be treat-from the United States into Mexico has been one of the principal levers of American influence in the Mexican situ ation, and has been the storm centre of agitation ever since armed revolution began in Mexico in November 1910. It was charged by the Diaz government, then in power, that the re-bellion waged by Mexico was sustained by arms purchased in the United States President Taft ordered troops to the Mexican border to enforce neutrality, but notwithstanding this, the Madero revolution was quickly successful. The border patrol of several thousand troops since has been maintained chief-ly to prevent smuggling of arms.

The United States was confronted in the spring of 1912 with another revolutionary outbreak, this time by Orozec against the Madero government, which had been formally recognized. Again the United States took the position of assisting the regularly constituted government, but President Taft asked for specific legislation empowering him to make the embargo against arms more effective. Accordingly, a joint resolution was passed on March 14, 1912, by Congress, providing:

"That whenever the President shall for the time and American country constituted government, but President Taft asked for real estate described in the said deed of trust as follows:

Fronting 19 feet, more or less, on the north line of Catherine Street, beginning 466 feet, more or less, west of Graham Street, and running back between parallel lines 191 feet, more or less, to an alley in the rear 8 feet wide.

N. B.—While the terms mentioned in the trust deeds are cash, easier terms may be arranged with the auctioneers at the sale. Expressions of Approval.

Expressions of warm approval came from both ends of the Capitol to-day, when news spread of the President's decision to lift the embargo. To members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee it was no surprise, for they prise me," said Senator Lodge, Republican. "I would rather not comment on it, but I shall try to sustain the Prestlican. "I would rather not comment on it, but I shall try to sustain the Prestdent in his foreign polley."

Senator Root, another Republican leader, commended the move, as did Democrats generally. Members of all political parties said that, regardless of the merits of the embargo itself, its operations hitherto had been a discovered to be a discovered to have the hoteless, on operations hitherto had been a dis-tinct disadvantage to the Constitution-as involving the United States as a partisan in the Mexican situation.

Inquiries as to whether the withdrawal of Charge O'Shaughnessy or any change in the border patrol was under consideration led to the declaration and the property.

And December 7, 1913, and December 7, 1913, respectively, and a note of $1,200, with interest thereon from maturity, and due to the declaration of the property.

WM. B. PIZZINI, under consideration, led to the decla-ration of high officials of the administration that no further steps were contemplated now.

The Capitol buzzed with gossip as to the probable effect in Mexico of the lifting of the enibargo. Many officials conversant with Mexican affairs did not believe any immediate change in the situation would result. In the highest official circles no excitement was dispartments.
